A Lost Friend

A FEMININE JACK OF ALL.

Lucero was a college in the town, the people were rather proud of the literary talent, having sent out two graduates from their midst. There was no doubt Margaret had had many opportunities of fitting her mind for almost any occupation she wished, had she chosen; but the thought of earning her living had never entered her mind, she had struggled along through school, going when she pleased, and learned whatever suited her fancy. Aunt had kept her close by her side while she lived, and, being a cultured woman of good family—for blood 'tall, even in a republic—she was a familiar footing with the oldest and wealthiest families, and had a pleasant circle of acquaintances. She had young and active, and, I suppose, she thought that mother is; suppose she goes to the city with us, and helps us select the carpets, furniture and pictures." Margaret consented willingly, and next day found her with the good doctor and his wife, plunged deep in the matter. They looked at the goods, visited the carpet, house-furniture, and went to the large furniture stores. That of selecting the furniture fell chiefly on Margaret, for the doctor made no choice whatever, and Mrs. Allen soon became confused by the variety of articles shown them. She kept up a constant "What do you choose, Margaret?" and at last fell back on a comfortable chair, modified her approval as Margaret met her selections.

By evening, Mrs. Allen was completely worn out, and on the way home said: "Margaret, dear, I could not get another thing to save me. My life feels like one of those flying Dutchmen." "What was I thinking, Margaret?" she was asking, "I couldn't you go back to-morrow, and pick out the pictures and bric-a-brac for me?"

So Margaret went back to the store alone, and selected the pictures, bric and dainty bits of bric-a-brac for

"This proved the most delightful of all her ventures, for the return of the roses in the fall called to mind the roses in Janet's cheeks, and the time became a bower of sunshine to her laughter."

"How successful Margaret had been!" said Mrs. Melaney to Mrs. S. "about three years from the date of our famous luncheon. 'But she had labored longer than most other girls having many wealthy friends would think.'"

"I help. Margaret's advantage in seizing the duty which lies nearest and never neglects an opportunity which she has of doing even the best task. What she cannot do for herself she gladly gives to some one else, and is paid by their love and willing service. Nine out of every ten placed in her position would have done, and after spending a year for highway, and in 1610, and for years thereafter, it had but one brother for anybody's sister Ann to cross. The population of London at the time of the accession of James was a little over one hundred and fifty thousand, and the people of Paris numbering more than those of London and Dublin put together. The city was lighted with tapers containing cotton-wick cankerously all travelers carrying, or borne for them, their own links and they ventured into the streets after dark of sun-dried red and white roses and green in the Temple Gardens for their descendants grow in the earth to-day. — Lawrence Hutton Harper's Weekly.

The idea of those survivors of North pole expedition eating boots—eating leather! I don't believe it.

"Why not?" asked the oldest brother in the house. "I did not see any lives, but there is no much difference between it and dying at the same time?"

The Marked Bank Bills.

"Marshall, won't you do me the favor to keep this five dollar bill for me. I want to take my money to the bank, and I am afraid, if I keep it myself, I'll be tempted to spend it."

"Why, certainly, Edward, I'll keep it for you with pleasure." And the youth who had been addressed by his companion as Marshall, took out his pocket-book and put the bank note carefully in it by the side of one of the same denomination that was already deposited there.

Archie Marshall and Edward Franklin were fellow-clerks in the large wholesale house of Zimmerman & Co., and being about the same age, and formerly schoolmates, were very intimate, both in and out of their business associations.

Marshall lived with his parents, and Franklin was an orphan, but he was a boy of excellent character and served his employers faithfully; yet, while Archie was economical in his habits, Edward was just the reverse, and spent his wages freely. This explained the request made of his friend.

While the two boys were talking about the money, Mr. Zimmerman, the senior partner of the firm, passed by, and he took the opportunity to notice the transfer of the money to Marshall's pocket-book.

A few moments later, an errand boy told Marshall that Mr. Zimmerman would like to see him in the counting room.

Dropping his work, the young clerk proceeded at once to see his employer, wondering at the strange summons, for he had never had one of the kind before.

He found Mr. Zimmerman alone in his private office, and looking unusually severe and serious.

As Archie knocked at the door, the merchant without looking up, told him to come in and be seated. After a moment's silence, Mr. Zimmerman looked up.

"Marshall," said he, "I am a plain-spoken man, and will not beat about the bush at all. We have lately been missing small sums of money from the cash drawer, and while I am loathe to suspect you, I would like to examine that five-dollar bill which you have in your pocket."

"Certainly, Mr. Zimmerman," replied Archie, promptly handing his employer his pocket-book. "I can assure you, I don't think of anything but my work."

Mr. Zimmerman looked at the frank face of his young employee a moment, and said, with equal hesitation:

"Well, Marshall, it is just this. I told you before, we have been missing money, and look the precaution to mark some bills with a pen and ink, so that you can identify them. I have just given you a little while ago, I saw Franklin give you what I thought I recognized as one of those marked notes. Ah! here it is now!"

Saying this, he drew forth the note which Franklin had given Marshall, and pointed to an "X" in one corner, which had apparently been made in red ink with a quill pen.

"And here is another!" he exclaimed a moment later, as he disclosed the other note belonging to Marshall, which also bore the guilty mark.

The young clerk was too much shocked and surprised, for a time, to make any answer. His face flushed and he looked down at the notes with emotions of guilt and fear.

"I cannot imagine how this came, Mr. Zimmerman," he finally gasped. "The first note you saw belongs to Franklin, and the other I got as part of last week's salary. Franklin cannot have money, and he asked me to keep his five dollars for him."

"I can very easily see that," responded the merchant, "but the proof is plain. Your resignations will be accepted, to take effect at once. Of course it will be impossible to keep you or Franklin longer in our employ after this evidence of guilt on your part."

"But you will allow me to call Edward, will you not, Mr. Zimmerman?"

"Oh, yes," replied his employer; "but I cannot see what possible good that can do."

"He can tell where he got his note," explained Marshall.

When Franklin entered the office, in response to the summons, his fellow-clerk asked him:

"Where did you get that five dollar bill you gave me to keep for you, Edward?"

"It was a portion of my last week's salary," replied Frank, at a loss to understand the query.

"There is some terrible mistake about this, Mr. Zimmerman," protested Archie. "I never stole anything in my life, and I certainly would not legitimize now, when I have everything that I need, getting well paid for my work."

"You heard Edward say he got his note in his salary, and that is where I got mine."

"That will do," said the merchant coldly. "You and Franklin will hand in your resignations immediately, and I will see to it that you are both paid for your work, but I hope this will serve as a salutary lesson to you both for the future."

"I am very young, I feel disposed to be lenient toward you."

Archie turned about with flaming cheeks and trembling lips, and was in the act of leaving the office with his fellow-clerk when Mr. Ford, the junior

Choice Apparel.

New York, August, 1890.

When fashionable society dispersed itself in various directions to reassemble at Newport, Bar Harbor and Lenox, and got themselves to set old Time flying, or as Swinburne has it, "To kill, before, mouse him, let him die," its members began their pastime with the comfortable conviction that when they returned to their city homes with their butterfly summer plumage much the worse for wear, they would find all ready to replace it, the most charming models of fall gowns and wraps.

Those who go to Bedford for their choicest apparel, and who in Society, (with a big S.) doesn't? will have their highest expectations realized, for there have been convalescent consultations between the heads of the great Paris, London and New York houses, and the result is some of the most delightful creations which this celebrated firm has ever signed with its magic name. With its usual courtesy it has presented us, for the delectation of our fair readers, a couple of the newest sketches, which we here reproduce.

A Redfern Street Gown.

of dark green Amazon cloth, whose skirt has a very slight but graceful drapery at the top, just sufficient to give what the French term movement. Across the foot of the skirt at sides and front, is a graduated row of bands, each one ending in a point at the top, and set in diagonally. These are of black braid outlined with gold and black mixed cord. A similar arrangement forms a plastron trimming just below the collar, and a braided girle across the front. One of the new Henri Deux collarettes of ostrich feathers completes this very stylish costume.

The second costume is rather more striking, as it is

A Combination of Two Shades of Smooth Cloth.

The under-skirt, which shows at the right side, the upper part of the bodice, and the deep cuffs are of olive, while the rest of the gown is a dark beige, a tint which promises to be very high in favor this season. An elaborate pattern braided in cord of these two colors, mixed with tulle, borders the drapery where it opens at the sides, and is also used to edge the bodice drapery below the bust and upon the upper part of the sleeves.

A Gigantic Production at the Boston Theatre.

For more than a generation the Boston Theatre has stood acknowledged as the most magnificent Dramatic Temple on this Continent, and the triumphs achieved on its stage are without parallel in the history of American theatres. Mr. Tompkins, determined to sustain the prestige won by "The Exiles," "Michael Strogoff," "Youth," "Jama," "Run of Luck," and other great productions identified with his personal management, has for nearly a year been preparing the Romantic Spectacular Play THE SOUDAN, giving to the details the closest attention, and securing every aid to perfection which experience and taste could suggest or unlimited expenditure secure. Every scene is new, and every detail perfect. Hundreds of uniforms and accoutrements, worn by soldiers in the Soudan campaigns, were purchased direct from the Bureau of Equipment of the British Army, and Costumes and Appointments were made to order in London. Mr. HENRY SEVILLE, the foremost English actor of the day, has been secured for the role of the hero, which he originally created at Drury Lane Theatre, London, and the company of favorites which includes S. E. Sprague, Frank Lester, Victor Loring, Lawrence Edginger, Dan Collier, Harry Hawk, Harry Rose, Ed Lawrence, A. W. Rumble, John J. Geary, Russell Hunting, H. A. Wallace, Robert Mackay, W. H. Gilbert, Geo. J. Farren, Sylvio Warren, John Lyons, Louise Balle, Eleanor Moretti, Kate Oesterio, Mrs. W. G. Jones, Jeanette Harold, Emma Rose, Kate Murray, Master Walter Lewis, and the phenomenal boy actor, Master Willie Edginger, assure the most adequate support. Several hundred people will take part in the action, and the stage pictures for magnitude, realism and effectiveness will surpass any ever seen in America. In the scene at Trafalgar Square nearly 500 people will appear at one time, a number which no other stage in America can accommodate. The return of the soldiers from the war, cavalry, artillery, infantry, camel corps, with horses, military bands, drum and life corps, Scottish pipers, and the welcome given them by relations and friends, will be beyond question the most magnificent display ever made in any theatre in this country. The Soudan will be presented for the first time in America at the Boston Theatre, Monday evening, Sept. 15th, 1890, and will be repeated every evening and on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons till further notice.

Tacoma beats the record for rapid growth. Her rate of increase during the last ten years was 5,300 per cent.

AN ABSOLUTELY SAFE,

Nutritious Laxative Tonic

A CURE for constipation; a safe and rapid PURIFIER of the BLOOD,

and a strengthener of the Liver, Kidneys, Nerves and Skin.

(COPYRIGHT.)

Ordinary laxative compounds afford only temporary relief; they weaken the intestine and destroy its natural action, while the body, as a whole, is hardly benefited by the drugs which have confined their action almost exclusively to the bowel.

This remedy, on the contrary, is a MEDICINAL FOOD which permanently strengthens the intestine, and secures its regular action long after the remedy is discontinued. Moreover, certain portions are absorbed by the blood and contribute to the Liver, Kidneys, Nerves and Skin, the elements necessary for their healthy action. Thus this nutritive substance strengthens all the organs of elimination; acts as a solvent of waste products; overcomes stagnation; sweeps accumulating poisons from every part of the body, and encourages all the tissues to resume their youthful freshness and vigor. It restores the system to its normal condition, and is found ESPECIALLY USEFUL in all cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Headache, Backache, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervousness, and Disturbances of the Kidneys or the Skin. It is of great value also in preventing indigestion, and in overcoming the discomforts arising from over-eating.

Special Notice.

"N. L. T." is made strictly after the formula of a highly educated and most successful physician, who has made great use of it in his extensive practice. It is having yet effective in the cases where there is need of such a remedy, and we, knowing its exceptional worth, have, quite apart from our usual custom, secured the right to advertise and dispense it.

To its great usefulness we seek especially to call the attention of physicians, who will find it a pleasing adjunct in all treatments which seek to strengthen the whole eliminative function of the body.

The removal of waste is becoming a distinguishing feature in modern medicine. The prevailing habits of life, so different from those of the ancestors whose bodies we inherit, and the present fashions in diet, and their little reference to the needs of a more or less sedentary life, are leaving almost unassisted the overworked organs of elimination. Such habits should be corrected, the diet should be in keeping with the occupation, the time of life and individual peculiarities. To all that concerns the THERAPEUTICS OF DIET, a subject the scientific consideration of which has been too long and too universally neglected, this association is especially devoted, and our products are widely recognized and employed; but there are cases which call for immediate help through medication. In these we advise the use of what has already proved itself a safe and satisfactory assistant.

Why Royal Baking Powder is the Best.

"The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made both for that company and the United States Government.

I will go still further and state that, because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the Purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public.

How Milk is Made.

The following comes from Prof. J. W. Robertson of Ontario: All the milk of cows is made in a most mysterious way. The elaboration is effected in two glands called the udder. These two glands lie together lengthwise of the cow's body. You can see the gland from the other without rupturing the remaining one; there is no organic or distinct division between the two glands of each gland. The milk in the gland is elaborated from the blood, a physiological process imperfectly understood. It is that so, and doubtless it is so, it becomes necessary for every dairymaid to see to it that the cow is kept in good health, and that the milk is of good quality. The blood from which the milk is formed enters the glands by two large arteries. Alongside the arteries runs a large vein and nervous cord.

Numerous ducts arise from milk cisterns at the top of the teats; they spread through the whole structure of the udder. A small portion of the blood enters or percolates through the membrane that lines these ducts and becomes milk. Beginning from the bottom of the teat there is an opening which stays closed without any effort on the part of the animal, therefore the milk does not leak. If this muscle relaxes the milk will drop out. At the top of the teat there is another valve over which the cow exercises control. She can close it and hold the milk above that valve; then a man may tug at the teat and get nothing while the cow holds up her milk. When the cow has this valve closed it is mainly owing to undue excitement. When the cow is much excited the lack of nervous equilibrium will make her close this valve and shut off the milk flow. Sometimes if the cow and the dog try to race for home, when the cow is beaten by the dog she becomes excited and holds up her milk.

There are a great many tiny cells on the inside of the ultimate follicles of the milk ducts. They are so small that if you measure a row of them not one inch in length you will find 2,000 or 3,000 of them. They each grow a bud; that bud grows larger and larger until it becomes a globule, and these globules constitute the fat of the milk. These tiny globules drop and trickle down inside these milk tubes and come down with the rest of the milk. The last milk is richer than the first.

Why Tomatoes Rot.

The rotting of green tomatoes just as they begin to ripen is a phenomenon often noticed, but of which we have seen no adequate explanation. Perhaps we will not be able to fully explain it, but a few facts may help to a solution of the problem. The present year, by the way, the rotting of tomatoes has been more general, and seems to continue longer than usual. It is only the first tomatoes that rot, provided the first are picked off and destroyed. The disease is a fungus, and apparently has power to propagate itself with great rapidity, after the manner of this kind of vegetation. From the fact that as the vine ripens, naturally the rotting ceases, it has been inferred that it is propagated by an excess of sap in the stalk, which then breaks out and causes rot in the fruit. The great amount of water falling in June and early in July gives some show of reason for this theory. It may also be from lack of potash or other mineral element needed to produce the seed that the rot occurs. Up to the time of the first fruiting the plant has had little demand for potash or other mineral elements. It is at first unpurified for the unexpected call. Later the plant provides the potash or whatever else the growing fruit may require, and the rotting ceases, though where vines are allowed to overlive they may continue through the season. Woodashes are, in our experience, an excellent fertilizer for tomatoes, and where they are used the rot of the fruit causes little trouble. [—Ex.]

Degeneracy of the Strawberry Plant.

Investigations have recently been made in regard to the cause of the rapid degeneracy of the varieties of strawberry. Hundreds of new kinds have appeared during the past quarter of a century, every one of which was supposed to be better in some respects than existing kinds, and yet the fact remains that the best strawberries of to-day are no larger or better in any respect than the numbers that have been displaced. It now appears that the strawberry plant under cultivation is liable to a disease, which is its wild condition as Fragaria Virginica is free from this disease. It takes the form of small, round, brownish-red spots on the leaves, which are caused by a small fungus which has been determined to be Sphaeria fragariae. Why it should attack the cultivated form and not the wild form led to investigation. It was noted that the new seedling introduced from several years—some remaining free longer than others. The conclusion was reached that the strawberry is naturally confined to high northern regions, or, if descending to warmer latitudes, becomes a denizen of woods or shaded, grassy places, the highly heated ground of cultivation is unfavorable to great vitality. When the "tone" of the strawberry plant's system becomes reduced, it is an easier prey to the fungus. In time all varieties become reduced, in time all varieties degenerate. The effort of strawberry improvers is rather to keep the race from degenerating than to get much better than we have. This scientific investigation of the strawberry, it is believed, will lead to valuable practical results.

Recipes for the Table.

TOMATO CATSUP.—Cut ripe tomatoes into thin slices; then put into a stone jar a layer of tomatoes and a layer of salt, and stand aside for three days. Then press through a sieve, and spice to taste, bottle and seal.

GINGERBREAD.—Two cups milk, half cup sugar, half cup molasses, one teaspoon ground ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon, one tablespoon butter, two teaspoons baking powder, flour enough to make a good batter. Beat hard, and bake in a steady oven.

USE OF STALE LARD.—Cut a stale pound cake into slices 1/2 inches in thickness, pour over them a little cream and fry them slightly in fresh butter. When done, place over each cake a layer of strawberry or any other preserve.

LIGHT ROLLS.—One cupful warm water, two cups milk, one egg, one cake; flour enough to make a soft batter. When light add a large spoonful of butter and one of sugar, and mold. When well risen, divide into small pieces, make into rolls; grease plate with the white of an egg and bake.

LEMON TARTS.—Fill a number of tart shells with puff paste and bake. Grate the rinds of two lemons, add two cups of water, one cupful of sugar, a spoonful of almond flavoring and boil, and thicken with two spoonfuls of corn starch. A small lump of butter improves it for some taste. Fill the tarts with warm; ice the top.

RAISED CORNMEAL MEAT.—Two cups milk, two cups cornmeal, one tablespoonful white sugar, one tablespoonful lard, quarter yeast cake. Heat the milk to boiling, and pour it upon the meal. When this is warm, beat in all the other ingredients except the lard. Let it rise six hours. Add the lard. Fill molds, and let the batter rise twenty minutes before baking.

PICKED NASTURTIUMS.—Pick the green seeds after the flower has dropped off with stems about 15 inches long, lay them in moderately salted water for forty-eight hours. Then lay them in fresh cold water twenty-four hours, drain, pack in bottles or jars, and cover with boiling vinegar. Tie up, and stand away at least four weeks before you use them. These may be used as a substitute for capers.

FATTY PUFFS.—With one pint of flour sift one-half teaspoonful of soda and one teaspoonful of cream tartar and a little salt. Mix with 1/2 cupful of lard, making a thick batter. Fill the custard cups or tea cups nearly full of the batter, then a tablespoonful of any kind of canned fruit or even apple sauce without any juice. I should have said use about one-half the batter in the first place. Now put about as much on top of the fruit as was beneath it, and steam from one-half to three quarters of an hour. Eat with sugar and cream or any sweet sauce.

RYE BREAD CAKES.—Two eggs, three cups of milk, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, half a teaspoonful of butter, one even teaspoonful of salt, 1/2 cupful of rye meal, two cups of wheat flour, measured before sifting. Two teaspoonfuls of white sugar, sift the wheat flour and rye meal with the soda and salt. Sift the rye meal very thoroughly, then add part of the milk, stirring until smooth. Add the eggs, first well beaten, then the remainder of the milk, and last of all, the butter, melted. Beat all together, and bake in two tin pans, roll or cup-shaped, well buttered and very hot.

Household Hints.

Mix stove blacking with spirits of turpentine. It will take off the rust, polish easier, and stay glossy longer than when water is used.

Fold a broad cloth small and lay over the top of the pan, taking it off some time before taking the bread, so that the dough can dry a little above the tin before putting it in the oven.

A simple cough remedy is made of an ounce of dissolved iodine in a pint of water, a little honey added, an ounce of rock candy, and the juice of three lemons, the whole mixed and boiled well.

A pound of sugar is usually required to every pint of juice, though less may be used in making currant or grape jellies. For straining the juice, it should never be extracted by squeezing, but allowed to drip through the jelly bag.

Always sift all kinds of meal and flour, taking a wire sieve, as a hair sieve is too fine, measuring before sifting, unless otherwise directed. It makes a great difference for corn bread what kind of meal is used. Always use the yellow bolted meal for brown bread, and for any recipe for corn bread, unless white meal is specified.

Half-pint jelly glasses are the best. They should be rinsed in scalding water and dried, then stood up side by side in some large pan, and filled with the jelly to the brim. Allow them to stand a day or two in some sunny window, cover them, if possible, with bits of glass, and as the moisture gathers on the underside wipe it carefully away.

Save the small paper bags carefully which groceries come in; they are useful in many ways. Slip the hand in one when you back the stove, and you will not soil it. When flies abound, slip them over the clean lamp chimneys during the day. After fruit is canned draw them over the can and label them plainly, the action of the light causes more fruit to spoil than any other one thing.

A cement which will adhere perfectly to glazed surfaces, repair broken mirrors, or in fact stick to anything, is made by taking two ounces of clear gum arabic, 1/2 ounce of fine starch, one-half ounce of white sugar. Pulverize the gum arabic, and dissolve it in as much water as the tameness will use for the quantity of the starch indicated. Dissolve the starch and sugar in the gum solution. Then cook the mixture in a vessel suspended in boiling water until the starch becomes clear. The cement should be thick as tar, and kept so. It can be kept from spoiling by dropping in a lump of gum camphor, or a little oil of cloves or sassafras.

Tenth row—Slip and bind 8 stitches, knit 6, seam 1, knit 2, seam 1, knit 2.

There should be fourteen stitches left. Begin at the first row again. This makes a very pretty lace pattern, and the rules given are correct.

COLORED BLANKET FOR BASSINETTE.

Take the camel's hair cable work. The leviathan or largest needle may be used. Make a chain the width of the blanket or of the strip for use. Take up each stitch of the chain on the needle, draw back one, the wool on the needle, draw through 3 loops together, 1 chain repeat from 4.

Draw wool through, under first chain, then take up chain again, repeat over each chain, at the end of the row 1 plain in the last stitch. Work back, through 1, then through the 3 loops, chain repeat from 4.

This wool makes easy bedroom slippers.

PORTIERS AND CURTAINS.

Electric-blue satin sheeting, worked with gold-colored thread, is a happy combination; if something more elaborate is required, a dark blue ribbon may be chosen for the background; upon this design may be applied of white linen, while over this white linen applied a design in red of a rich, warm shade. Embroidered cushion covers are a little out of date, but some ladies still prefer them to the self-colored silk ones. Brown sheeting colored well by hand-dyed work with dark brown, old gold and white silkenelle, the strands of which are laid and caught down with thread of the same color. Another cover looks well worked on twilled linen. The design should be worked over with heringbone, button hole, stem and satin stitches, and lined with cord. This embroidery may follow the design of the material, but quite as often it is carried upon the fabric pattern without any regard to the pattern.

GREENED LACE.

Either thread or silk may be used. Make a chain of 15 stitches.

1st row—Miss 3, 1 treble in fourth chain stitch, 1 chain, miss 1, 1 treble in next chain stitch, repeat from * 4 times. Make 2 chain and 1 treble in first stitch of chain.

2d row—Turn, 3 chain, 0 treble in next chain stitch, 1 chain, 1 treble in last hole made, * 1 chain, 1 treble in

They Were After Bargains.

One is lad enough, two are worse, for three women in counsel over the merits of a bath towel are enough to make a poor, worn out clerk wish he might depart from earth by the electric railway.

"It seems like quite a good one for the money, doesn't it?" says the intending purchaser.

"Well, I don't know," says the other, holding the towel up at full length and eyeing it critically. "I am quite as good for 37 cents at White's."

"You did?"

"Yes, but it was eight or nine weeks ago, and I don't suppose they've any more like it."

"I may be mistaken, but I've an idea it would shrink," says another, taking the towel from number two and wrapping a corner of it over her finger.

"See, it's a little thin."

"Well, I wouldn't mind if it did shrink a little, because—oh, look at this one! Isn't it lovely?"

"Beautiful! How much is it?"

"A dollar and a half."

"Mercy! I'd never pay that for a bath towel!"

"Not I."

"These colors would fade."

"Of course they would."

"Do you know I like good plain crash as well as anything for towels."

"I don't know, but—see these towels for fifteen cents. I paid twenty-five cents for some last week and not a bit better."

"Let's see; they are full length. Yes, they are cheap. I've a good notion to—but I guess I won't. I have so many towels now."

"They're bargain if one only really needed them."

"How do you like towels used as dusters?"

"I think so, too."

"So do I—oh, let me tell you. I saw a woman on the street one day with an apron made out of a red and white fringed towel!"

"Mercy! Looked like fury, didn't it? How was it made?"

"Oh, one end was simply gathered to a band, and—there, the towel was just like this one—she'd taken it so and gathered it in so, and—really it didn't look so bad, after all."

"Do you suppose the colors would run in this border?"

"Well, I hardly know. I had one very much like it once, and the colors didn't run dreadfully the first time I washed it."

"Then I'll not take this, for I—why, if it isn't 4 o'clock, and—"

"I must go."

"So must I—no, I'll not take the towel today."

People Who Never Take a Day Off.

There are thousands in New York, including some of the very best people in point of worth, who can take no vacations by reason of poverty or pressure of service, and then there are a few, who, having plenty of money, prefer to continue the incessant toil. Here, for instance, is Henry M. Stone, the manager of the Journal of Commerce, who is worth $500,000, and might after nearly half a century of labor be reasonably entitled to a rest. He has not, however, during this long period of labor taken any vacation, finding recreation in work itself. He has of late years, though, had the benefit of an extensive convalescent and also of a daily trip from Brooklyn and return. He has a very powerful constitution and can endure protracted labor better than many others. Another instance is found in Walter J. Quintan, assistant cashier of the Chemical Bank, who will only be absent from the city on Sundays. The Chemical with its savings bank is a large institution for such a man to leave for a day. Quintan has risen to his present position by close application, which has at last become a part of his existence. These examples, to which I might add some others, may afford some consolation to those who are held with equal tenacity to the post of duty. [—N.Y. Corr. Troy Times.]

The Ocean's "Undertow."

Doubtless we have all heard a great deal about this "undertow," as though it were some mysterious force working from the recesses of a treacherous ocean to draw unwary bathers to their doom. As a matter of fact this phenomenon is obviously natural, and the explanation of it more than simple. As each wave rolls in and breaks upon the beach, the volume of water which it carries does not remain there and sink into the sand; it flows back again, and, as the succeeding wave breaks over it, the receding one forms an undercurrent flowing outward of strength proportionate to a great measure to the depth of the ditch. Where this latter is an appreciable depression, it can be readily seen that the water of receding waves will flow into it with similar effect to that of water going over a fall, and that a person standing near is very likely to be drawn over with it, and thus the ditch is deep enough earned out of its depth. This is all there is to the much-dreaded undertow, and the numerous accidents to its account. [—Scientific Magazine.]

TIVERTON.

The sudden death of Capt. Horatio Wilcox was a great shock to all his relatives and friends. On the Saturday previous to his death, whilst walking on the street in Providence, he became dizzy and could scarcely stand, after a time the dizziness passed off and he went about his work, apparently in his usual health. On Monday morning, soon after breakfast, he boarded his steamer, Dolphin, and went on deck to talk with a friend. They were engaged in earnest conversation, when suddenly Capt. Wilcox's head dropped and he fell. He was taken into the cabin and laid upon the bed, where in a few minutes he breathed his last. The body was taken to the undertaker's and was buried on Saturday at 11 o'clock A. M. at the residence of his brother, Capt. Edward Wilcox, the Rev. Mr. Hilditch, of the United Church, officiating. Capt. Wilcox was a member of the United Church, and was a very popular and successful man. He was married to Miss Alice Wilcox, daughter of John Wilcox, Randolph and Angelo Alexander acted as pall bearers. The remains were placed in the vault of Mr. Osmond in Grace Church cemetery, to await the return of Mrs. Horatio Wilcox who is now traveling in Europe. It is probable the interment will take place in the Wilcox family lot, at the old Presbyterian cemetery, east of Tiverton Four Corners, where, within the space of three years, Mrs. Holden N. Wilcox has laid to rest her husband and youngest son Albert. The sympathy of the community are with the afflicted family, but especially with the absent wife and aged mother, who on account of ill health was unable to attend the funeral of her son.

Capt. William Reynard and wife are on a visit of two weeks to Halifax and St. John.

Miss Minnie H. Crapo of Dartmouth is on a visit to her uncle Capt. Jason W. Gifford.

Mrs. George E. Allen and daughter's Flora and Laura have been spending the vacation in town, returned home Friday.

Mr. Judson Mackenzie of Fall River, entertained a large party at his summer residence Seapoint, Friday, thirty-five ladies and gentlemen besides fifteen children from Stone Bridge, Fall River and other parts shared in the generous bounty of their host who provided for the comfort of his guests in his usual open-hearted style.

Mrs. E. Bailey of Urbana, Virginia, is the guest of Otis Gray and family.

Frank I. Fish and family of Taunton, are staying at the Smith Cottage.

A very enjoyable family reunion and clambake was held Saturday in the orchard adjoining the residence of Captain Julius A. Potley on Puncetee Neck. The company represented four or five generations, of whom eighty were present, some from Fall River, some from Little Compton and other parts.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hunt, of Boston, are the guests of Mrs. Alfred G. Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark and family of New York, are visiting relatives. James Douglas, who was injured by the kick from his colt, died Saturday morning. Funeral services were held at his late residence, Monday, the interment took place at the Hillside cemetery.

A Tale of Woe.

[From the New Bedford Standard.]

The Newport Observer says that Tuesday Officer King was called to Elizabeth Johnson's, 20 Long wharf, in that city, where a light-complexioned, handsome girl of 16 years, was becoming her lot. She told the officer that a fortnight ago she came to Newport from this city in company with William Alliston, who said he had a good situation, and would marry her when they got there. This he did not do, and when she became homesick and desired to return home he took away her clothes. The girl made a confident Tuesday of Mrs. Johnson, who told the officer she thought the couple were man and wife, it having been represented to her that they were married in New Bedford. Officer King procured the girl's clothes by threatening Alliston with arrest for abduction, and Mrs. King paid her fare to this city. The account in the Newport paper adds that the girl's name is Ida Phillips which rather destroys the romance. She is a colored girl, who is well known in police circles here, and some years ago in connection with her mother gave evidence which resulted in her father being sent to State prison for incest with her. Ida was before the court Oct. 24th last on a charge of being idle and disorderly. Her mother was sentenced to the house of correction, and she was sent to the Temperance home. She conducted herself well, and benevolent ladies interested themselves in her, and she was secured a situation, and the charge against her has been continued from time to time, and is still pending.

We publish in this week's Mercury the new election law under which the election in this city is to be held on the 10th of September. It will pay every voter to read it carefully.

Carpenter Thos. P. Smith, U. S. N., has been transferred from the training station to the U. S. S. Boston, and Carpenter Joseph E. Cox, U. S. N., has reported for duty in his place here.

The Newport Artillery company have abandoned for the present the project of adding another story to their armory on Clark street.

BARGAINS

Random Mention.

Men's State and Tan assorted Half Hose, of fine gauge and light, regular 35c. goods, but we bought too many, and shall close the balance at 25c. per pair.

Here is another lot comprising 50c. 50c. and 50c. goods—they, too, will go for 25c. The trouble with them is they are mostly small sizes—hence the sacrifice.

Men's fine Cashmere Socks, in choice patterns, 50c. goods, to close at 35c.

Men's genuine French Socks, 50c. goods, to close at 35c. Hereafter you have known them only at 50c.

Ladies' fancy Hosiery, autumn styles, of good hosiery patterns, fast black, some come in solid colors, also 25c.

A specially fine grade of Ladies' hose, 35c. black, which means that they are perfectly fast. These are 25c. too.

Ladies' Silk Hosiery, boot patterns, absolutely fast—which sounds improbable in a 50c. hose—but in reality they are the 50c. grade at nearly half value.
